

ROBERT WADE - THE MAN THAT TRIED TO WARN US

The economist from London School of Economics, Robert Wade should be well known to most Icelanders by now. He tried to warn us again and again but nobody would listen. He is in fact still warning us and yet again he feels that nobody is listening.

In the movie he explains how strange it felt to him that all warnings , from himself and others were ignored and even made suspicious in spite of numerous strong indications , facts and logic.

Robert Wade´s input into the discussion has been noteworthy and his appearance in the film „Maybe I should have" is no exception.
